Hongkong, 9th March, 1901

In his report on Hongkong in 1899 H.E. the Governor devotes a section to the subject of Education, which, in view of the recent discussion on the teaching of European children in the Colony, will be read with interest. Sir HENRY BLAKE Writes of a state of affairs which is practically that which obtains now, though there have been additions to the number of smaller schools since the date at which the report was penned, and a new day-school, designed to accomodate 200 children, has been founded at Kowloon through the generosity of Mr. Ho Tune. We will follow the division education under different heads which is adopted in the report. Firstly under the head of primary education there are two main classes :- schools where an English education is given (the only ones which need concern us now), and schools where a vernacular education is given. Each-division may be subdivided under the three heads:-(1) schools entirely supported by Government; (2) grant-in-aid schools; (3) private schools. Of Government schools which give their pupils an education in English there are four, outside Queen's College. Education is free, and the majority of scholars are Chinese and Eurasians, with a few Indians. They are under the charge of native teachers capable of teaching up to the fourth standard. At the annual competive examination of the four schools, four boys are selected for free scholarships tenable at Queen's College. In addition, the Belilios Public School for girls gives an English education to girls and a few boys too young to enter Queen's College. Eighteen grant-in-aid schools in 1899 gave an English education, and their grants depend on the results of yearly examinations. Nearly all are attached to some religious ing about the 14th prox. body, and, except the Diocesan School, St. Joseph's College, and Victoria English School, they only give a primary education. Of the new school at Kowloon, which is not education only. Secondary education does not, therefore, enter within the scope of "the Kowloon school, which shall be school in which an ordinary education shall "be given of such a nature as to enable the "scholars to enter in the ordinary course "for the Oxford Local and similar examin-"ations." The senior division of such examinations, however, is not contemplated, except perhaps in the remote future, when the senior certificate of either Oxford or Cambridge may come to be regarded as the proper leaving certificate to be obtained by the pupils before they quit school. The number of private schools giving an English education, without Government inspection or a grant, fluctuates, but there were in 1899 seven properly called schools. The great object of those attending these schools, says. the report, seems to be to get a smattering of English to enable them to find employment as shroffs, clerks, compositors, etc. As educational establishments proper they are hardly to be classed.

The line between primary and education, as Sir HENRY BLAKE remarks, is still more difficult to draw in Hongkoug joice over this as a recognition of America's than in England, where the distinction is supremacy in a new field. by no means clearly marked. Here no one institution pretends to give secondary education only. Queen's College, the Diocesan School, St. Joseph's College; and Victoria English School, all preparing candidates for the Senior Oxford Local Examinations, give a secondary education to a limited extent; but in all the great majority of the boys receive only a primary education. Queen's College has a staff qualified to give the higher education, but (says the report) the time is not yet ripe for it to be turned into a secondary education institution only. Education commences with the "ABC and goes up to the Senior Oxford Local standard. The Belilios Public School also sends up pupils for the Oxford Locals, including the senior division. As we have seen, the Kowloon day-school also may ultimately send up pupils for the Senior Oxford Local and similar examinations. But this list exhausts the facilities for an English education beyond the primary stage. It will readily be seen, therefore, how well founded. is the agitation which aims at securing for the Colony a school which will offer to the children of European parents resident here the opportunity of a sound education fitting them for the duties of life. It is in the fact that such an education cannot be obtained in the mixed schools with which Hongkong is well provided rather than in the actual objection to the mixing of different races that the strength of the appeal for a school for European children lies. That objection to m moon not to be nightly regarded, as 1607 there can be no doubt that it is felt by a large number of parents. The two reasons combined make up a case, the justice of pany which cannot be disputed. It is satisfactory to think that steps are now being taken for the adequate presentation of this case to the play at the Hongkong-Hotel this evening from Government. Government support must school as is asked for. It is impossible to imagine that Hongkong will continue indefinitely to lag behind the rest of the European settlements in the East. We hope to see the existing state of affairs changed as soon as possible. To secure this result it is necessary in the first place that European parents should be firmly resolved to back up with all their strength the appeal when once it is put in a concrete form.

by the respondents to the appellants of 650 bags of green peas, while the respondants brought a cross-suit-No. 20 of 1901-sgainst the appellants, claiming $154-63, damages for breach of contract for the purchase by the appellants from the respondents of 650 bags of green peas, of which the appellants failed to take delivery. The two suits were heard together, and on the 16th January, 1901, the Court below gave judgment in favour of the respondents in both cases. From that decision the present appeals were brought. The facts out of which the suite had grown few and simple The appellants and respon dents were both firms of merchants carry ing on business in Victoria. On the 24th November, 1900, the parties entered, through the scency of a broker, into a contractin writing for the sale by the respondents and the purchase by the appellants of 650 bags of green pess. It was understood on both sides that the peas were not ready for delivery but were to be imported from a place called Chan Kong, on the River Yangtsze. Bought and sold notes were executed and exchanged which were identical in their terms, mutatis mutandis. but the translations of these which had been put in evidence differed materially in their sense. However, it was agreed at the hearing of the appeal that a translation which had been prepared by his learned brother might be taken as correct. According to this translation bought note said .- "It is sattled clearly that within two weeks the goods arrive. On delivery of the goods, immediately money notes will be delivered in exchange. It is settled clearly that according to foreign hong fules it is limited to ten days to issue (the goods) in full." There was some conflict of evi dence between the parties as to what thok place before and after the making of the contract. The appellants said they informed the broker they wanted the goods "within two weeks." The broker did not say that the condid not say they must telegraph for them." On

veyed an intimation to this effect to the respondents, and the respondents denied that he did so. The broker said that the respondents informed him that "a steamer would arrive in two or three days' time having peas;" and further that they the other hand the respondents stated that they told the broker that they "would send the peas from Ching Kiang (another name for Chan Kong, mentioned in the contract), near Nanking; that they expected them to arrive after two MESSES. SIEMSSEN AND COL CHARGED UNDER weeks:" "and that on the same day they wired to Ching Kiang." Again, the broker said that between the 24th November, when the contract was executed, and the 4th December he saw the respondents on four separate occasions, and enquired of them when the peas were going to arrive. The respondents, on other hand, declared that the broker only came to see them once after the of the contract, namely, on the 29th vember. He must confess that, so far sa he could form an opinion with respect these differing statements from merely reading the notes of evidence; his inclination was accept the appellant's version of the matter more consistent with the terms of the written and in the godown 58, all unmarked. contract and with the probabilities of the case. At any rate it was clear that the appellants were anxious to get the neas as soon as passible. The question at issue between the parties turned, of course, upon the construction of the contract. On behalf of the respondents. it was contended that they had ten days during which to make delivery of the goods, at 233 and 235 were gutted and damage was and that this period of ten days, in the done to the extent of $15,000, the accountant events which had actually happened, commenced at the latter shop has been committed for trial to run on the expiration of the other period of at the Criminal Sessions on a charge of arson. 14 days mentioned in the contract, and was to be added to it. The result of this contention | master of No. 233, but withdrawn. would be that the respondents had a period of 14 days altogether during which they could perform the contract on their part. The Court below adopted this construction, holding that the stipulation as to the time within which the goods were to arrive was immaterial EUROPEAN CONTINUENT. Inspector Mac- and did not go to the essence of the contract. and, as the goods had been notified as ready for delivery on the 24th day, judgment was given for the respondents in both cases. With much respect and after long consideration, he found himself unable to follow this reasoning. It appeared to him that the term as to the arrival of the goods was intended by both parties, and especially by the buyers, to be a material

one. In his opinion the appeals in both cases must be allowed. In suit No. 1,049 of 1900 judgment must be entered for appellants for the difference in price tween 440 bags of peas at 82.75 a picul the same quantity at $2.90 a picul. In suit No. 20 of 1901 judgment must be entered for the appellants. The appellants must have their costs in both suits, both in the Court below and

The Acting Puisne Judge, after dealing with the points raised, said that in his opinion the judgment of the Court below was sound and the appeal should be dismissed with costs.

HONGKONG'S FINANCES

企业的企业 Sir Henry A. Blake's report on Hongkong for 1809 has the following section on MP ADOO":

"During the year 1899 the Actual Revenue. exceeded the Estimated Revenue by $290,622.76 exclusive of the amounts derived from land sales and the water account. If these sums are included, the excess of actual over estimated revenue was $724,006.25. The expenditure excooded the estimate by $467,369.80. This is exclusive of the amount spent on Public Works Extraordinary, which was considerably less than had been estimated. The total excess of actual over estimated expenditure was, therefore, only $288,520,56. The excess was due to expenditure in connection with the New Territory, which aracunted to $283,000. Of this, $47,000 was expended on account of the Police Establishment, while $112,000 was spent on roads and

The tables which follow show the General Revenue and Expenditure, the Assets and Liabilities, and the Public Debt of the Colony The Revenue in 1899 showed a nett increase on the pravious year's figures of $691,984.01. To this land sales contributed no less than $484,505.85, while the only decrease specified was under the head of Post Office, where the falling off was $19,270.83. The total Revenue for 1899 was $3,610,148,25, and the total Expenditure $3,162,792,36, leaving a surplus of $447,850.89, roughly six times the surplus of 1898 and ten times that of 1897. The Assets of the Colony amounted in 1899 to $454,543.13, and the Liabilities to $766,316.45; but in the Assets is not included $831,109.92 value of silver

The Englishman in China during the Victorian Era: as illustrated in the Career of Str Rutherford Alcock, K.C.B., D.C.L. By ALEXANDER MICHIE, Edinburgh and London, William Blackwood and Sons.

(Third Notice) THE Arrow War, which name we may conveniently apply to the war of which the capture of the lorcha Arrow was but an incident, may be said to have commenced in December, 1856, by the burning of the "Foreign Factories" Canton, and the issue of a proclamation by Viceroy Yeh, offering rewards for English heads. Yeh marked the close of an era which had been initiated by Commissioner Lin, and it may be said to have finally ended in the peace concluded in Tientsin on the 27th June, 1858. Of the war Mr. Michie's work gives a condensed, though useful account; Wingrove Cooke, Lawrence Oliphant, Stanley Lane Poole, De Moges and others give full details. During the final negotiations at Tientsin, an ominous figure the old Canton policy was being tried on, and the populace were invoked as the instigators Unfortunately old Kiving had in a confidential report to the Emperor disclosed in so many words the game he had been playing, and amongst the papers found in Yeh's yamen on his capture was the original memorial. Klying was sent for, and in the most polite manner shown his own document; the old diplomatist was caught in his own trap, and disappeared. He was not forgotten by his Emperor, who sent him an equally polite message that he had lived sufficiently long. Kiying had no option but to secept; Yeh, too, overcome by chagrin, shuffled

He came to be accused artillery. A detachment under a fing of truce of invouring the mercantile interest, and Lord was sent to arrange a suitable site; it was Elgin, who hated trade and despised traders, received with all apparent courtesy, but determined that he would throw overboard all when out of eight was set upon past failures. The treaty he made had been previously drafted by the Foreign Offices in London and Paris. So little had he to say to it that on its signature he characteristically observed: " Anyone could have made the treaty." Of him Mr. Michie pertinently says:

It was his fate, much against his will apparently, to wage war on China in order to revindicate a right which had lapsed through the weakness and wrong-headedness of certain British representatives; yet in the closing act of a perfectly successful war he commits the self-same error on a more comprehensive scale, entailing on some future Government and plempotentiary the necessity of making yet another war on China to recover what he was giving away. What is the explanation of this continuous repetition of the same mistake? It would soem that, knowing nothing of the Chinese, yet imagining they knew something, the representative of Great Britain and of other Powers, notably the United States, have been in the habit of evolving from their own consciousness and keeping by them a subjective Chinaman with whom they play dummy, and of course score horribly, as the most recent diplomatic slang has it. Their despatches are full of this game-of reckoning without their host, who, when brought to book, turns out to be a wholly different person from the intelligent automaton kept for Cabinet use To this kind of illusion Lord Elgin was by temperament more predisposed than any of his predecessors, maye Captain Elliet. Though convinced by his first encounter that Chinese statesmen were fools and tricksters, the simulacrum soon asserted supremacy over the actuality of experience, and to the honour of the very persons so stigmatised he committed the interests of his country, abandoning all the securities which he held in his hand." Alluding to the spirit in which he undertook the task entrusted to him, our author quotes three men connected with mercantile houses in China whom I find on board is all for blood and massacre on a great scale."

Believing this, and acting according to their consciences, most men of honour would have resigned the task imposed on them. Lord Elgin's conscience was not so straight-laced. Believing he was doing wrong, as we have his own words for stating, he yet characteristically for a consideration accepted the task; and tried to square it with his conscience by deliberated. spoiling the work. This is the dilemma which we are placed by his own confession in passing judgment on the man. Probably he thought that there was more honour with less trouble to be gained from being the first to conclude a treaty with Japan; and this is the most lenient view we are permitted to take of his undeniable failure in China.

Be this as it may, having made the treaty according to his instructions, instead of waiting to see its ratification, which only entailed a journey of some eighty miles, he without waiting moment showed his disregard of the whole spirit of his instructions, and scuttled off to Japan. momentarily appeared on the scene; that was a The Chinese who had taken the measure of their reappearance of old Kiying, who, after a long man, on his return approached him and by period of diagrace, consequent on his association espolary induced him to rescind the most with the "barbarian" in the occupation of important stipulation — that of residence in Hongkong, was as a last resource sent down to Peking. There were no telegraphs in those join the Chinese peace commissioners in the hope days, and Lord Elgin, who felt that the game that his previous successes in the colony might had been thrown away, and seeing that the prove of advantage in softening the demands of lapsed condition could not be regained withthe British and French plemipotentiaries. So ingloriously ended officers were stoned, and every attempt made the second China war. Before he let China in the approved manner to get up a row; he himself pronounced his own condemnation; his despatches remain to bear witness against him. "A variety of circumstances lead me to the conclusion that the Court at Peking is about to play us false" was the burden of his last despatch.

What all Lord Elgin's colleagues had warned him at the time would assuredly happen came the next year to pass. His brother, Mr. Frederick Bruce, came out accredited to the Court at Poking as first British Minister. On arriving at Taku, escorted by the fleet, he found the river blocked and entrance forbidden to the Minister; an attack with such force as the admiral had available was repulsed with considerable loss of life, and the third China war became a necessity. Lord Palmerston no longer held office, and a vacillating Government again sent out Lord Eigin with a sufficient military and naval Warnings, as the Book of Proverbs reminds Lord Elgin showed himself a notable example of the man who could not learn. The French and English forces, after some fighting, made themselves masters of the Taku forts, and from three. "The wise man, without moving, under- the individuals captured. They were at stands; without observing, comprehends; with- once sent in chains to Peking, where out action, achieves." So said the Chinese sage; the greater number were tortured to death.

and Lord Eigin, a steadfast though unconscious. The individuals concerned in this barbarous act disciple of the "Doctrine," made it his rule in were perfectly well known; they were never his subsequent negotiations to despise the punished, and the example, as we have learned opinions of those who from experience were to our cost, grew into a precedent. Until the qualified to judge, and to ignore the facts of recent attempted murders of the Ministers en bloc, no Chinese official has ever been punished for his crimes, however treacherous or contrary to the established laws of nations. As if to place Lord Elgin's incapacity to comprehend the situation in the clearest light, he made the misdeed the occasion of one of the greatest outrages on civilisation ever committed-in the looting and burning of the Summer Palace. When Omer burnt the Library at Alexandriahe had at least some ex cuse. " If the books are in accordance with the doctrines of the Prophet, they are superfluous; if they contravene them, they ought to be destroyed." Miserable as was the excuse, it was better than could be offered for the destruction of this priceless museum to save the heads of a few savages like Sankolinsin and his fellow plotters. (To be continued.)

Already there has been much talk of the new British coins which must be issued before long. But the important question is, who is to designthem? You may guess my feelings, therefore, to find myself now cured by taking 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' and applying 'Clarke's Miraculous Salve, especially as I have a family of eight childern. My log measured 184in, round against 14in, the other, and part of my work I have done on my knees .. The matter coming from my leg was us bl k as soot, but it has now completely healed up, and I am out of agony, a thing not known to me for the past eight years. must say I think my case a marvellous me. - com menced taking ' Clarke's Blood Mixture' in July, 1898, and the cost has been one small bottle to try the effect first, and finding the proper remedy, then ten large ones, also a few pots of the saive, and my leg not off. I have spent pounds in other remedies, but they have been no good to me. I shall be pleased to answer any questions, and afflicted brothers and sisters can see my leg for themselves. You can make any use of this letter for the public good. "31, Mulkern-road, St. John's-road, Upper Holloway, London, N., May 25, 1899. THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS OF WON-
